

Sensorial Encounters (Rome/online, 25–26 Nov 24)

Bibliotheca Hertziana – Max Planck Institute for Art History, Rome / online, Nov 25–26, 2024

Tobias Teutenberg

“Sensorial Encounters: Haptic and Non-Visual Access in Art” is an exploratory workshop that challenges the primacy of visual perception and terminology in art and art history. Inspired by the methodological insights of authors such as Georgina Kleege, Elizabeth Bearden and Amanda Cachia, among others, this workshop questions the traditional conflation of sight with knowledge.

We invite scholars, artists, and thinkers to explore the dimensions of non-visual experiences in art. How do these experiences shape our understanding of subjectivity? What could we learn about an object if we were to feel it versus looking at it? How should these objects be displayed? We seek contributions that delve into these questions, offering diverse perspectives on sensory experiences and their implications for art and society.

This workshop will explore how artists who eschew ocular-centric practices have historically engaged with non-visual perception and created spaces to rethink access as more than a mere accommodation. We will examine how these artists' works offer new modes for understanding art and its interaction with the public.

The workshop seeks to redefine artistic encounters by emphasizing the role of touch, sound, and other senses in experiencing art, thus positioning disability not merely as a subject of representation but within the field of creative and affective agency.

Please follow the Workshop also online on Zoom.
