

Dark Sides of Life in Schubert's Vienna (Vienna, 22–24 Oct 25)

Wien, Oct 22–24, 2025

Deadline: Apr 7, 2025

Werner Telesko

The world of Biedermeier Vienna was not only bright, friendly, and cozy, but also had its dark sides. Poverty, illness, and sudden death were commonplace, and people were confronted with melancholy, the gothic, the uncanny, and the supernatural. The dark sides of this period also include secret societies, rampant censorship, and a wide range of activities that did not take place in the light of day, such as illegal gambling. The fifth annual conference of the Schubert Research Center will explore these phenomena within the larger cultural, historical, and artistic context of Schubert's time. Schubert himself was said to have a "dual nature" and often "produced songs of the most agonizing beauty in the dark, sacred hours."

We invite papers that examine topics such as Schubert's enduring fascination with death in his compositions (beginning with his earliest pieces), the miserable realities of everyday life in Vienna in historical perspective, and the dark Romanticism evident in so much of the art and literature of the time.

Applications should include a short CV and an abstract of about 300 words. These materials should be sent to schubert@oeaw.ac.at at no later than 7 April 2025.

Most of the costs for travel and accommodation will be covered by the Schubert Research Center. The conference language is English.

Reference:

CFP: Dark Sides of Life in Schubert's Vienna (Vienna, 22-24 Oct 25). In: ArtHist.net, Jan 23, 2025 (accessed Jul 13, 2025), <<https://arthist.net/archive/43764>>.