You are cordially invited to an afternoon workshop organized by Bogazici University, Department of History.

IMAGINING HISTORY, PLACE, AND IDENTITY IN THE EARLY MODERN WORLD:
PERSPECTIVES FROM OTTOMAN, SAFAVID, MUGHAL, AND HABSBURG VISUAL CULTURE

12 January 2013, Saturday
at Boğaziçi University, Cultural Heritage Museum, 13:30

The first Boğaziçi workshop of a related theme, also organized within the framework of Boğaziçi University History Department's participation in the Getty Foundation's Connecting Art Histories initiative was held in March 2012, and explored issues of connectivity and juncture between traditions and practices of visual representation in contiguous periods and geographies encompassing the Byzantine, Ottoman, and Persian worlds. We now address early modern connections, dialogues, and distinct trends in pictorial representation in a broader geography encompassing the Safavid, Ottoman, Mughal, and Habsburg domains. Papers explore uses and meanings of historical, spatial, and literary imagery in particular contexts and in response to particular loci and conjunctures. They present inquiries into the roles of visual imagery in the making of cultural identities, and provide comparative insights into visual articulations of historical and spatial imaginaries in the early modern world.
