

Panorama seeks Digital Dialogues Section Editors

Remote

Application deadline: Jan 15, 2026

Keidra Daniels Navaroli

Panorama (journalpanorama.org), the online, open-access, peer-reviewed journal of the Association of Historians of American Art (AHAA), is seeking two Digital Dialogues editors to join the journal for a three-year term beginning with our June 2026 issue. This position comes with a stipend of $500 per completed issue.

The Digital Dialogues section of the journal reviews born-digital resources, virtual initiatives, and data-driven scholarship in and concerning the field of American art history. Digital Dialogues also captures conversations about the impact of digital content and communication across professional work in the field, in research, education, collections, curation, publishing, and activism. These shorter-form pieces (500-1,000 words) can take a more informal tone and should include one high-resolution image. In addition to text submissions, we also encourage submissions in alternative formats and media (such as audio and video).

In alignment with our mission to “embrace the study of the diverse artistic production that circulates within and beyond the constructed geographies of what is now the United States” and “model collaboration, inclusivity, and dialogue,” we encourage applications from diverse scholars, including those who may be new to the Association of Historians of American Art and/or Panorama readership. Museum professionals, independent scholars, academics, and those who work in adjacent or interdisciplinary fields grounded in art-historical inquiry and visual and material culture study are welcome, as are international scholars or others living and working outside the continental United States.

Ideal candidates will be organized and detail oriented with an excellent record of scholarship and, if selected, must be members in good standing of AHAA. Successful candidates should be comfortable with MS Word and Google Docs; Panorama will provide training in OJS, our online submission management system.

To apply for this position, please send a CV and statement of interest by January 15, 2026, to journalpanorama@gmail.com with the subject line “DIGITAL DIALOGUES EDITOR APPLICATION.”
