

Photography's Tacit Knowledge (Leicester/online, 15–16 Jun 26)

Leicester, De Montfort University / Online, Jun 15–16, 2026

Registration deadline: Jun 10, 2026

Prof Gil Pasternak

Photography has always depended on diverse forms of knowledge—from chemistry and mechanics to artistic practice—yet much of this expertise remains tacit, embodied, and difficult to articulate. This conference invites participants to explore how such hidden knowledge shapes photographic practice, research, and interpretation, and to consider its broader political, social, and cultural implications in an increasingly interdisciplinary and AI-influenced landscape.

Organised by the Photographic History Research Centre (PHRC) at De Montfort University in Leicester, UK, the 2026 conference examines how photography produces, conceals, and challenges tacit knowledge. Speakers will address methodological and theoretical approaches while reflecting on the continued relevance of these unseen practices across fields such as science, industry, archives, and visual culture.

The programme highlights themes including photographic labour, embodied archival knowledge, scientific imaging, and emerging post-photographic technologies. By foregrounding questions of power, access, and expertise, the conference offers a vital platform for making the invisible visible—and for rethinking how photographic knowledge is created, shared, and understood today.
