

nonsite.org #9: The Labor Issue

Victoria H.F. Scott

New issue of nonsite.org including Samir Sonti on how to make higher education free, Sarah Brouillette on academic labor and the aesthetics of management, and Jonathan Poore on the figure of Bartleby in Occupy. With artworks by Sam Durant and Jeff Wall. Features include: Mariola V. Alvarez on Ferreira Gullar's Non-Object Poems, Micheal W. Clune on Thomas Bernhard, Adolf Reed, Jr. on "Django Unchained," and Todd Cronan and Simon Critchley on The Ontology of Photographic Seeing. Plus a poem by Nate Klug.

Table of Contents

Going Back to Class:

Why We Need to Make University Free, and How We Can Do It

By Samir Sonti, University of California, Santa Barbara

Academic Labor, the Aesthetics of Management, and the Promise of Autonomous Work

By Sarah Brouillette, Carleton University

Bartleby's Occupation: "Passive Resistance" Then and Now

By Jonathan Poore, Rock Valley College

Features

The Anti-Dictionary: Ferreira Gullar's Non-Object Poems

By Mariola V. Alvarez, Rice University

Bernhard's Way

By Michael W. Clune, Case Western Reserve University

Django Unchained, or, The Help:

How "Cultural Politics" Is Worse Than No Politics at All, and Why

By Adolph Reed, Jr., University of Pennsylvania

Todd Cronan and Simon Critchley in dialogue on

The Ontology of Photographic Seeing

Some Passages from Virgil's Eclogues

By Nate Klug

<http://nonsite.org/>

Reference:

TOC: nonsite.org #9: The Labor Issue. In: ArtHist.net, May 3, 2013 (accessed Apr 25, 2025), <<https://arthist.net/archive/5247>>.