Revista 180

Call for Submissions:

REVISTA 180 – Journal of Architecture, Art and Design,
Universidad Diego Portales, Santiago, Chile;
Indexed in Web of Science, Scopus, and SciELO.

Revista 180 invites submissions of original scholarly articles on a rolling basis, year-round and without thematic restrictions.

Published since 1998 and now bilingual (Spanish/English), Revista 180 is a peer-reviewed journal committed to critical and empirical research at the intersections of architecture, art, and design. It foregrounds work that operates from within disciplinary practice while remaining attentive to the productive tensions that arise where disciplines meet, overlap, and unsettle one another. The journal values both disciplinary rigour and the capacity of cross-disciplinary encounter to generate broader theoretical or cultural reflection.

We welcome contributions engaging, but not limited to:

- Architectural history, theory, and criticism
- Spatial and material culture
- Design research and visual studies
- Territory, infrastructure, and the built environment
- Digital culture and its spatial dimensions
- Curatorial and exhibition research

There is no fixed deadline and no required thematic focus: authors are encouraged to submit work reflecting their own research agendas at any time of the year.

Submissions are reviewed through a rigorous double-blind peer review process. We aim to provide initial feedback within three months of submission.

Articles may be submitted in Spanish or English. Full submission guidelines are available at:
