"Photographic Imagination": International Conference

Art History Department, The Faculty of the Arts, Tel Aviv University

In collaboration with The Shpilman Institute for Photography, Yale University, and The Bucerius Institute for Research of Contemporary German History & Society in University of Haifa.

Conference Organizers:

Margaret Olin, Yale University

Amos Morris-Reich, Haifa University

Vered Maimon, Tel Aviv University

The "Photographic Imagination" conference reconsiders the relations between photography and knowledge by focusing on concepts of and roles played by the imagination in the history of photography. While throughout the twentieth-century much critical and theoretical discussion of photography has focused on issues of representation, "objectivity," and "truth," that is, on the relationship between the photographic image and its "real" represented object or referent, this conference seeks to generate different questions by addressing photographic images not as "true" or "false," but as acts or events whose performative aspects are as important as their representational ones. Chief among these are the complex and ceaselessly shifting relations that exist between photographs, their producers and recipients, and involve irreducible processes of imaginative investments and projections. These processes at the basis of the relationship between photography and the imagination are the focus of a multi-disciplinary conference employing interconnected lines of inquiry and interlacing historical, philosophical, cultural and political perspectives.
