4th INTERNATIONAL SUMMERSCHOOL 09-11 JUNE 2014

DEPARTMENT OF ART HISTORY, UNIVERSITY OF ZURICH

ORGANIZED BY THE DOCTORAL PROGRAM «MEDIA HISTORY OF ARTS»

Section I: Ostentatious Spaces – Exhibition Displays in the 20th Century

The exhibition space as a contested place of experience is the focal point of this section. We are particularly interested in the influence of avant-garde art practices, architecture and media theory, as well as philosophical notions of the display on exhibition design during the 20th century in global perspective. In this regard we will depart from previous studies that predominantly grapple with the absorption of exhibition spaces by culture industry, or its role as a disciplining apparatus in the administration of modern life. This section is as much about a critical investigation into the form of exhibition spaces through the lens of image science as it is about analyzing the multi-layered dynamics of influence between exhibition spaces and the modernization of life during the 20th century.

Section II: Photographs on Pages

Photographic images in magazines influence the visual culture of society, while at the same time magazines reveal changes in the self-conception of the photographic medium. This interrelation has been particularly evident and of importance for the discursive development of photography. "Photographs on Pages" asks how magazines during the 1970's and 1980's apply photography and how they grapple with the medium's ambiguous status between document and artwork. At that time, classical documentary photography is in crisis, and its representation in leading journals such as Life Magazine and Paris Match asks for new solutions. Concurrently, photography discourses shift the focus from questions that exclusively approach the indexical quality of photographs towards the medium's self-reflexive potential.
