

Intermediality No. 26, issue « Habiter (la nuit) / Inhabiting (the night) »

Deadline: Apr 6, 2015

Simon Thibodeau / Revue Intermédialités

Call for submissions

« Habiter (la nuit) / Inhabiting (the night) »

No 26, Fall 2015

A thematic issue of the journal

Intermédialités: Histoire et théorie des arts, des lettres et des techniques /
Intermediality, history and Theory of the Arts, Literature, and technologies

Issue editors:

Luc Gwiazdzinski (Université Joseph Fourier), Will Straw (McGill University)

Deadline for abstracts: April 6, 2015

Notification of acceptance of abstract: May 4, 2015

Submission of complete texts for evaluation: September 1, 2015

Publication of issue: December, 2015

Intermédialités/Intermediality is a biannual internationally renowned peer-reviewed journal. It publishes articles both in French and English.

Abstracts of proposals (up to 300 words) in English or French should be sent by April 6, 2015 to the issue editors:

Luc Gwiazdzinski - lucmarcg@gmail.com

Will Straw - william.straw@mcgill.ca

The editorial committee will announce the final selection on May 4, 2015.

Submissions should be no longer than 6,000 words (40,000 characters, including spaces) and should be sent as email attachments to the issue editors. Authors are encouraged to use audio, visual, still or animated illustrations when appropriate. The deadline for submissions is September 1, 2015.

Authors are requested to follow the protocol for submitted manuscripts, which are available at <http://cri.histart.umontreal.ca/cri/fr/intermedialites/protocole-de-redaction.pdf>

For more information on Intermédialités please visit the journal website at <http://www.intermedialites.com>. Issues of the journal are available through the on-line portal Erudit : <http://www.erudit.org/revue/im/apropos.html>

Description:

The last decade has seen a significant number of scholarly works dealing with the urban night. Broad histories such as those of Wolfgang Schivelbusch, Simon Delattre and Joachim Schlör have been followed by more specialized studies from within such disciplines as urban policy, geography, lighting design, entertainment history and cultural studies. City governments throughout the world are moving to devise policies to control or open up the night. Activists have moved explicitly to produce “manifestos” or other interventions aimed at the status of the urban night. Colloquium and other scholarly meetings, often in collaboration with community groups or city governments, have proliferated.

Amidst this flurry of activity, the status of the urban night in relation to media forms remains undeveloped as an object of investigation. Histories of the urban night will stress the role of electrification in transforming the spaces of nocturnal labour, interaction and culture, but the place of these transformations within shifting economies of information and cultural expression remains under-examined.

Although the great media forms of the 20th century (cinema, radio, television and the mass-circulation newspaper) occupied particular intervals within the 24-hour cycle, this aspect of their social-industrial life invites further analysis. So, too, does the effect on the 24-hour cycle of the disengagement of media from punctual parts of that cycle, through the rise of content-on-demand systems and the generalization of the Internet.

In what ways, this issue will ask, is the urban night implicated within medial forms. The night has been conceptualized, within poetic and scholarly works, as territory, parenthesis, substance and scène: Likewise, the night has inspired distinctive categories of artistic expression, from the musical and visual nocturne through the film noir. Recently, cartographies of the urban night offer increasingly complex ways of rendering that night in visual or audiovisual terms. All of these treatments of the night are engaged, explicitly or implicitly, in defining a broader expressive economy of the night.

Habiter (la nuit) / Inhabiting (the night) will bring together texts which examine the variety of ways in which the urban night is marked by those media which map, structure, represent and transform it.

Reference:

CFP: Intermediality No. 26, issue « Habiter (la nuit) / Inhabiting (the night) ». In: ArtHist.net, Feb 5, 2015 (accessed Jun 9, 2026), <<https://arthist.net/archive/9411>>.